11. AI authorship:

(<https://link.springer.com/brands/springer/journal-policies>)

Large Language Models (LLMs), such as ChatGPT, do not currently satisfy our authorship criteria. Notably an attribution of authorship carries with its accountability for the work, which cannot be effectively applied to LLMs. Use of an LLM should be properly documented in the Methods section (and if a Methods section is not available, in a suitable alternative part) of the manuscript. The use of an LLM (or other AI-tool) for “AI assisted copy editing” purposes does not need to be declared. In this context, we define the term “AI assisted copy editing” as AI-assisted improvements to human-generated texts for readability and style, and to ensure that the texts are free of errors in grammar, spelling, punctuation and tone. These AI-assisted improvements may include wording and formatting changes to the texts, but do not include generative editorial work and autonomous content creation. In all cases, there must be human accountability for the final version of the text and agreement from the authors that the edits reflect their original work.

Generative AI images

The fast-moving area of generative AI image creation has resulted in novel legal copyright and research integrity issues. As publishers, we strictly follow existing copyright law and best practices regarding publication ethics. While legal issues relating to AI-generated images and videos remain broadly unresolved, Springer Nature journals are unable to permit its use for publication.

It is mandatory for authors to submit the following with final submission

- i. Final Paper Submission in word format.
- ii. Final Paper Submission in word format.
- iii. Similarity Report (Turnitin or iThenticate) of the final version
- iv. AI Detection Report (Turnitin or iThenticate) of the final version
- v. Consent for publication (Will be shared by the organizers as and when received by the publisher)

Note: Coordinators, Technical Programme Committee and Conference Organisers will not shoulder the responsibility of those authors and their submissions who fail to comply (for any reason) with the above mentioned 12 points, and do not submit the revised papers in time as per the guidelines.
